

How I Landed My Dream Marketing Job at Age 23

The story, the emails, the templates, the process, and the big win

I distinctly remember the feeling in my gut as I put down the phone, having just been hung up on by the person interviewing me for a marketing job I was really excited about.

Apparently, I hadn't made it clear that I was still in my last semester of college and wouldn't be ready for full-time work for another couple months.

I had prepared for days. Rehearsing answers over and over. Brushing up on terms and strategies. Doing all the research I could on the industry and company.

And then just minutes into the phone interview, sitting nervously in my car between classes, he hung up on me.
